Ready this morning, the Great Protestant Roman ARLINGTON CASTLE: A TALE OF THE By C. G. H., author of "Amy Harrington." "Curate of Linwood," etc. 1 vol. 12mo. 336 pp. Price, cloth gilt, 75 cents; paper, an Irish Heires, who, in order that her vast possessions should fall under the control of the Jesnita, became the victim of a determined unrelenting and unscrapulous persecution. Pursued and harrassed by every means that ingenuity, couning or hatred could suggest, she undergoes an amount of suffering and trial difficult to conceive, but igh which she evinces a faith so exalted, and a fortitude so noble, firm and enduring, that she arouses in us at once the deepest sympathy and the most sincere admiration. The beauty and sweet-ness of her character, her ennobling virtues, and her marry-like suffering are all pictured forth by the author with so much skill, deli-cacy and power, with so subtle a knowledge of the human heart, and with so wide and comprehensive an insight into human nature, that

For the flow and grace of its style, its abundance of incident, its absorbing adventures, its graphic pictures, its picturesque descrip-tions, its frequent rise into the grand and the terrible, we think that "Carlington Castle" will become one of the most admired and popu-ler works of the day.

In the preface to the work we are told by the author that, notwith-In the present to the variation of the events related, the principal circumstances are all founded upon events that have actually occurred in our own day and within the British dominions. All this is only proof that religious persecution did not pass away with the dark ages—that it still exists in our midst in many ways and forms, as vindictive as and relentiess, if not as open and as bold, as in the work, vis:

DASHES OF AMERICAN HUMOUR. By Howard Paul, Esq.
with laughable designs by the celebrated John Leech.

The universal manifestations of delight this book has called forth from the public press renders it unnecessary to add any praise of our own. We will merely mention a few of the titles of its humarous contents. "Jonathan Abroad" is as witty as the "Slick Sketches."
"Old Dan of Connectiont River".—"Snow Scenes." (with plenty of Yankes gale)—"Never sleep with your pantaloons under your Pillew"—will make the reader laugh, and he can't help it. "Looking up Ledgings," a quarter day story. "That Mysterious Bandbox" is one of the most cat chinatory tales in the collection: it is the adventures of an old maid and her Thomas-cat. "Colonel Crikley's Horse," the gueer history of a dead-shot, is quite a game article, and is enough to make a horse laugh!

The bandsome manner in which the work is "got up," the amount of matter, the fine paper and elegant printing, with the conical illustrations, make it one of the chapset books ever offered to the public. Price, in paper, 36 cents; an edition in cloth silt extra, 75

WOODMAN HART. This extraordinary ingenious and comprehensive work of art—the first and only thing of the kind ever conceived—stands forth as a monument of the unwavering parlience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of men.

hensive work of art—time his annument of the unwavering patience and perseverance of man, and as a most wonderful development of mentil fertility.

This is not a more paneramic display upon canvas, but an actual structure on Mercator's projection of over 1,800 square feet, composed of real land and water Immense labor and enormous expense have been laviabed upon the design. So real is the work that all the Oceans, Seas, Gulfs, Lakes, &c., are filled with ranning water, upon the surface of which does things and steamers visibly moving upon the surface of which does thing and steamers visibly moving as required form, while Volcances wishby beich forth sulpburic flames.

The dreadful Norwegian Markeroon is seen dealing destruction to all approaching objects. The diverse of the lifetated San Francisco is sinking in the bounded departure for their respective destinations. The Norwell and the structure of their respective destinations, and Rilly are factor assays, recently discovered by Cant. McClare, the Seas of War in Europe and dais, and the Gold Fleids of California and unstraits, are prominently in view. In a word, the delighted eye of the behelder can way with enthusiantic rapture over the centure surface of the michty Globe, and while he is surprised at the vast novelby of the design, he is delighted with the ingenuity of the mechanical operations and is convinced that the science of geography, often the laborious study of years, is here made the annusing lesson of an horoustry has been secured in the preparation of this mammod undertaking, and every possible pains within human compass has been bearing, and every possible pains within human compass has been bearing and every possible pains within human compass has been bearing and every possible pains within human compass has been bearing and every possible pains within human compass has been bearing season of an horous study of years, is here made the European charties wither with recent surreys published by authority of the design be is a perfect model of Sa
